For the Record

Qualified Fourth, for next Sunday's Indianapolis 500, Danica Patrick, who will become the highest-starting woman in the race's 94-year history. Were it not for a single early mistake, Patrick could have headed on the pole. The 23-year-old (from Rosemead, Ill.) had been fastest in practice, but slipped too low going into Turn 1 on her first qualifying lap on Sunday and her car bobbed. Patrick recovered, but her average speed on the lap was just 224.920 mph. (Starting positions are determined by a driver's four-lap average.) She then ran each of her final three laps faster than pole winner Tony Kanaan's average of 222.566 mph. Patrick, an IRL rookie who is 12th in points after four races, was told with heretofore, saying in her garage stall for half an hour before facing the media. Under Indy's new qualifying format, Patrick could have withdrawn her line and taken another shot at the pole, but Bobby Rahal—who with David Letterman co-owns the race of Patrick and last year's Indy 500 winner, Buddy Rice—decided not to risk losing the position. "Bobby told me, 'I've won from where you are. Let's go.' I guess I shouldn't be mad," said Patrick. "I drive for an awesome team. We've got great cars, and we'll just go racing now."

Ended After 23 years, Syracuse's streak of consecutive appearances in the NCAA lacrosse Final Four. On Sunday the Orangemen, who won nine national championships during the streak, lost to eighth-seeded Massachusetts in the first round of the NCAA tournament. The defeat followed an unusually trying regular season for the defending national champs—their first in a decade without a Powell brother in the lineup; Casey (1996–98), Ryan (1997–2000) and Mike (2001–04) were all four-time All-Americans and set the top three scorers in school history. Syracuse finished 7–5 and scored the tournament unseeded. Said coach John Danesi: "We probably came out of a game like this with more of an appreciation of the past, the tradition and the win."

Fired By LeBron James, Austin Goodwin, the agent who negotiated $135 million in endorsement deals for the Cavaliers' star James, who hired Goodwin in 2003 after his senior season at St. Vincent-St. Mary High in Akron, reportedly plans to replace him with friend and high school teammate Maverick Carter, 23, a Nike contract who is not licensed as an agent by the NBA players union. Two other James buddies, road manager Randy Mirra and Rich Paul—James and his three friends call themselves the Four J's—however, are expected to remain out of his management team.

Not just a pretty face

If Danica Patrick takes a big gulp of milk Sunday afternoon in Victory Lane after the Indianapolis 500, champagne bottles will be popping all over. Not just among the pit crew and executives of Rahal Letterman Racing, which will have won its second consecutive Indy 500. Executives at ABC and the other networks, magazine editors and sports talk-show hosts will be just as eager to toast sport's newest hero.

A victory would stamp Patrick as not only a pretty face, but also a pretty force who had won what until recently was unquestionably the biggest car race in the land. The 5-1, 100-pound brunette is a sudden media heavyweight, doing more than 25 TV interviews Monday alone, capped by an appearance on the late-night show of her car's co-owner, David Letterman. Yet if she is holding the Borg-Warner Trophy aloft Sunday, Patrick would become a bona fide phenomenon. She would be, simply, Danica, the newest one-name-only sports figure.

We'll let others predict Patrick's chances of victory. Certainly, the 23-year-old Indy Racing League rookie has made herself a real competitor, qualifying fourth for the race. Only a bobble on the first of her four qualifying laps likely kept Patrick from the pole.

Danica Patrick's already been a big story in her IRL rookie year, but will be even bigger if she's able to win Sunday's Indy 500.

"She does not want to be the next Anna Kournikova," says racing team co-owner Bobby Rahal of the attractive—and capable—Patrick.

HOW SHE STAYS IN RACING FORM

A self-described fitness fanatic, the 5'2", 100-lb. Patrick does about an hour of cardio daily, running or training on an elliptical machine. Up to three times a week she spends an hour lifting weights. "Most of the movements I make as a race-car driver have a lot to do with my shoulders and core," says Patrick, one of the finest drivers ever. "So I focus on my upper body." Patrick says she's also "very particular" about fueling her body and rarely strays from a limited menu of high-protein, low-fat fare.

In April Patrick sped to a fourth-place finish in Japan.

Danica Patrick

AGE: 23

HOMETOWN: Roscoe, Ill.

LATEST GIG: Star rookie on the Indy circuit, she will race on May 29 in the Indy 500; only the fourth woman to do so, but she has the talent and the car to win it.

■ Training wheels: Go-karts, which she tried because her younger sister Brooke wanted to race them. Parents Bev and TJ—who met on a blind date at a snowmobile race—made Danica's competitions a family affair. Says Patrick: "Family support was what kept it all going."

■ Fast track: At 16, Patrick moved to London to race on the Formula Vauxhall circuit. "It's the equivalent of automotive gang warfare," says Bobby Rahal, the Indy champ who was so impressed by her driving there that in June '02 he signed her to the high-octane team he co-owns with David Letterman. "She's a tough kid."

■ Secret weapon: Her intuition, says Patrick. "When we're going 200-plus mph, I can see things happening and have time to react to them. I think that is a special gift."

■ Idling: Enjoys life in the slow lane in Scottsdale, Ariz., with fiancé Paul Hospenthal, 39, a physical therapist and personal trainer. "She's kind of a TV junkie," Hospenthal says of Patrick, who also enjoys barbecuing and working out (see box). "But you won't see her watching much racing."

■ Caution flag: Don't be fooled by the pink nail polish. "Danica shakes your hand and, crunch, it's like a truck driver," says Rahal. "That's the yin and yang of Danica. The exterior is nice and pretty—and underneath she is as tough as steel." ●

Secret weapon: Her intuition, says Patrick. "When we're going 200-plus mph, I can see things happening and have time to react to them. I think that's a special gift."

Idling: Enjoys life in the slow lane in Scottsdale, Ariz., with friend Paul Hospenhal, 36, a physical therapist and personal trainer. "She's kind of a TV junkie," Hospenhal says of Patrick, who also enjoys barbecuing and working out. "But you won't see her watching much racing."

Caution flag: Don't be fooled by the pink nail polish. "Danica shakes your hand and, crunch, it's like a truck driver," says Rahal. "That's the yin and yang of Danica. The exterior is nice and pretty—and underneath she is as tough as steel."

Celeb Spotlight: Indy 500 Racer Danica Patrick

Get the lowdown on the racecar driver who has everyone talking

Thursday May 26, 2005 1:00pm EST

Age: 23
Hometown: Roscoe, Ill.
Latest Gig: Star rookie on the Indy circuit, she will race on May 29 in the Indy 500; only the fourth woman to do so, but she has the talent and the car to win it.

Training wheels: Go-karts, which she tried because her younger sister Brooke wanted to race them. Parents Bev and TJ — who met on a blind date at a snowmobile race — made Danica's competitions a family affair. Says Patrick: "Family support was what kept it all going."

Fast track: At 18, Patrick moved to London to race on the Formula Vauxhall circuit. "It's the equivalent of automotive gang warfare," says Bobby Rahal, the Indy champ who was so impressed by her driving there that in June '02 he signed her to the high-octane team he co-owns with David Letterman. "She's a tough kid."

Secret weapon: Her intuition, says Patrick. "When we're going 200-plus mph, I can see things happening and have time to react to them. I think that is a special gift."

Idling: Enjoys life in the slow lane in Scottsdale, Ariz., with fiancé Paul Hupenthal, 39, a physical therapist and personal trainer. "She's kind of a TV junkie," Hupenthal says of Patrick, who also enjoys barbecuing and working out. "But you won't see her watching much racing."

Caution flag: Don't be fooled by the pink nail polish. "Danica shakes your hand and, crunch, it's like a truck driver," says Rahal. "That's the yin and yang of Danica. The exterior is nice and pretty — and underneath she is as tough as steel."

Patrick set for debut as IRL's lone woman

By Amy Rosewater, special for USA TODAY

AVONDALE, Ariz. — The night before Danica Patrick took her first spin in an Indy car, she barely slept. "I woke up about every 20 minutes," Patrick said. "I realized there's no joking anymore."

Danica Patrick has come under criticism from former women racers for her provocative photo shoots.
